AMONG OUR CHURCHES

Rev. Virgil Elgin preached at the Methodist church Sunday morning and evening. In the morning he used as a text Rev. 2:17. The subject of the discourse was "Address to the Church at Ephesus." The principal thoughts were God's Commendation, God's Rebuke and God's Promise to the church. The evening text was Matthew 7:20. "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them." The subject was "Evidence of our Christianity is Fruitfulness."

Rev. J. H. Butler filled the pulpit at the Baptist church Sunday morning and evening. The subject in the morning was "Promise of the Father." The text was taken from Luke 24:49. "And behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." The subject was divided into three principal thoughts; first, what the promise was—Holy Spirit—which came to comfort, teach, sanctify and endure with power; second, conditions under which the promise was made, tarry in Jerusalem, put yourselves in condition to receive, have faith in promise and be willing to obey; third, time, when promise was fulfilled, until endued with power, auspicious, because of the many people in the city at the time. The subject for the evening discourse was "Seeking the Kingdom of God." The text was Matthew 6:33. "But seek ye first the Kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you." The principal thoughts discussed were "What to seek; why seek it; how to seek it and when to seek."

There will be services at the C. P. church next Sunday at the usual hours.

A union meeting is in progress at Dixon held by the pastors of the different churches. The Missionary Baptists, General Baptists, Methodist and Presbyterians are all united in the services.

BITS OF BYPLAY.

A local capitalist sold a farm for $250 and received no cash or its equivalent in the deal. The farm was sold for $250 and the debt represented by mortgage was $250. After this debt had bowed along for many years without payment the impetuous debtor approached his creditor with something like this, "Mr. Creditor, do you remember that farm you sold me?" "Yes sir, I do," replied the now interested creditor, "I remember it very well." "Well sir," said Mr. Debtor, "it is a good farm, is it not?" "Yes indeed," assented the creditor, "it is a good farm." "It is worth about $300, is it not?" inquired Mr. Debtor. "Yes I think it is," "Well then give me $50 and take it back."

J. W. Givens has been a butcher of Marion for many, many years. If all the hogs, sheep, cattle and other animals, who have died at his hands or at his instigation, were to suddenly appear as his property on his Elder patch of ground he would have trouble feeding them until he could get cars to ship them to Louisville. Not long ago Mr. Givens made a very grave mistake and one that cost him dear. He bought a beef cow and turned her in a pasture immediately adjoining the one used by Mr. John A. Hurley. In sending his slaughtering man he made the error of not explaining thoroughly or going himself and the consequence was Mr. Hurley's fine milk cow was led away to the shambles.

Harry Ramage, a son of Mr. Sam H. Ramage, was in Dycusburg Thursday of last week and had quite an experience. It seems that the river is out of the usual channel owing to the back water from the Ohio and therefore sloughs have to be crossed and dog boats used. Harry started out in the morning with Mr. Charley Cassidy. They crossed a slough in a dog boat ten feet long and about one and one-half feet wide. Coming back at noon Harry noticed that Mr. Cassidy seemed very well tickled about something and when in mid ocean, perched on the dog boat, which is somewhat similar to a tight high wire performance, the boat capsized. They were in twenty or thirty feet of water and forty or fifty feet of the shore. Cassidy went down laughing. He took his watch in his left hand and held it out of the water all the way to the shore. They were burdened with clothes and overcoats which made swimming hard. Ramage still thinks a joke was played on him.

A protracted meeting was in full swing at the Cumberland Presbyterian church. The house was crowded each night and much interest was manifested. It was a combination meeting and all of whatever denomination felt great concern. Billy Yates, the sweet singer of Sheridan, waved a little ten cent yellow song book in front of him with both hands and infused more life in things than one would suppose by a single glance at his smiling face. Right here it might be noted that there cannot be much wrong with a man who is in a good humor one-fourth of the time and grins the other three-fourths. So Billy Yates infused life into and pulled melody out of the whole congregation as well as the choir. The little yellow book waved back and forth, up and down, and Billy's eagle eye swept the audience. It finally occurred to him that the audience was not doing its duty. He stepped bravely to the front and said, "Now I would like for the whole congregation to sing this song. Let everybody in the house remain silent but this right hand section." The right hand section rose to the occasion nobly as one man and one woman and jarred the steam radiators. Upon request the next section did likewise. The third section did well but Billy discovered one man about half way back who did not sing. "Try that over," shouted Billy, "now Judge Moore I want you to sing," and he pointed the yellow song book straight at the judge as though it was a pistol. The judge is a man who never shirks a duty, so he spoke right out loud enough to be heard by all, "Billy, I can't sing, but I can whistle it if that will help any."

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Crider had them all fooled for quite a while. After the news got in the papers of Hopkinsville, Evansville, Henderson, Madisonville and Louisville they both gave up and while not saying in so many words that the knot had been tied, they refrained from making any statements to the contrary. There is quite a fascination about matrimonial mysteries. While the Crider-Roche affair was on every tongue two young ladies rushed to the postoffice looking for important mail. The both said they were badly scared, when asked why, said they were afraid they were secretly married and did not know it. One is the daughter of a prominent lawyer and the father of the other has grown old and gray in mercantile pursuits in Marion.
